

Wage/Superannuation Increase

Following the Annual Wage Review 2021, the Fair Work Commission (FWC) has announced a 2.5% increase to the national minimum wage. This will also apply to all award wages, with the award increase happening in 3 stages to delay the operative date for some industries that continue to be impacted by COVID.

This increase applies to anyone who is paid minimum award wages or the national minimum wage. If you are covered by a registered agreement, you should check it to see whether this increase affects you. The increase does not affect employees who already get paid more than their minimum wage.

For anyone not covered by an award or an agreement, the new national minimum wage will be $772.60 per week or $20.33 per hour.

The new national minimum wage will apply for most awards from the first full pay period on or after 1 July 2021. This means if you have a weekly pay period that starts on Mondays, the new rates will apply from Monday 5 July 2021. The increase for the General Retail Industry Award will apply from the first full pay period on or after 1 September 2021. The 21 awards that will increase from the first full pay period on or after 1 November 2021 are listed below.

What do you need to do?

Employers should now carefully review their wage arrangements and implement the necessary wage increases to ensure minimum wage rates are at least commensurate with the underpinning modern award.

Employers paying above-award payments should also review such arrangements to ensure that they are high enough to accommodate the increases (provided they are also supported by the necessary individual flexibility or other agreements).

Further, as a minimum, from 1 July 2021 employers' minimum superannuation contributions will be increased to 10% which must be paid into the employees' complying funds, calculated against Ordinary Time Earnings, to avoid liability to pay the Superannuation Guarantee Charge.
